Non-Compete & Trade Secret

As both local and national businesses endure the most trying economic times in over eighty years, it is imperative that business executives protect their proprietary information and client and customer relationships. Now, more than ever, competition for market share is fierce, and some businesses are resorting to simply taking their competitors market share by luring away their competitors key employees, and in turn, obtaining their competitors confidential and proprietary business information and most valued customer relationships.

Butzel attorneys practicing in the areas of Non-Compete and Trade Secret law possess a wealth of knowledge and extensive courtroom experience in representing and counseling clients in Non-Compete, Trade Secret and other competitively sensitive business disputes. Our team of attorneys have extensive local and national experience in auditing businesses and ensuring pro-active measures are set in place to protect against information and customer theft. Butzel also has a litigation team ready to move at a moments notice when a violation occurs. Over the past ten years, Butzel's Non-Compete and Trade Secret team have counseled and successfully litigated issues and matters in over 35 states.
