Butzel Long Attorney Aaron S. Kamlay Speaks on Importance of Technology for IP Practices

12.3.2020

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Butzel Long attorney and shareholder Aaron S. Kamlay was featured recently during two webinars on November 12 and 17, focusing on the use of technology for developing an efficient, client-focused IP practice. Hosted by IP Watchdog and Anaqua, the webinars presented panel discussions on how leaders in the IP field use technology to increase the strategic value of their legal advice and their clients' IP portfolios.

Kamlay has been practicing intellectual property law for more than 15 years and has represented clients of all sizes across a wide range of technologies, including numerous successful startups and multiple Fortune 100 companies. He specializes in complex patent prosecution and portfolio management, acquisitions and divestitures of IP, and portfolio creation, with a focus on building business value through strategic IP development. Kamlay currently leads the patent prosecution group in the firm's Washington, DC office, which is a key part of Butzel Long's full-service IP practice. The practice supports Butzel's clients through the full IP lifecycle, including high-stakes prosecution, litigation, and licensing of patents and trademarks, M&A diligence, patent monetization, and international trade issues.

Prior to joining Butzel Long, Kamlay founded Morris & Kamlay and worked at the IP specialty firms of Kenyon & Kenyon and Townsend and Townsend and Crew.

With a degree in physics and prior industry experience in programming, large dataset analysis, computer networking, and communications, Kamlay has obtained valuable patents for his clients in numerous fields, including artificial intelligence, high-availability databases, OLED devices, consumer electronics, optics, medical devices, robotics, and others.
