Attorneys address key employer questions

ANN ARBOR, Mich. – The “Affordable Care Act” (ACA), signed into law by President Obama in 2010, sought to reduce rampant double-digit medical inflation by making health insurance available and attainable for United States citizens and legal residents. Employer-sponsored group health plans cover millions of employees, and employers have struggled to stay abreast of the ACA requirements impacting those plans.

Butzel Long attorneys Mark W. Jane and Diane M. Soubly will address key questions and the future of the ACA during a free webinar from 12:00-1:00 p.m. EST on Thursday, October 18, 2018. To register, please visit: www.butzel.com/events. For more information, call Jon Spencer at (313) 983-6995 or spencer@butzel.com.

“Employers large and small have wrestled with the sheer scope of ACA requirements and changes over the past eight years,” notes Jane. “Almost two years into a very different Administration, the ACA landscape has radically changed,” comments Soubly. “Regulatory changes and the many ACA lawsuits filed by states, health care providers, and insurers have created uncertainty and potentially increased costs for employers.”

The webinar will explore such questions as:

- What legal challenges have employers faced as a result of the ACA’s provisions?
- What ACA requirements have changed and what are their likely impacts?
- What must an employer do today?
