ANN ARBOR, Mich. – Butzel, a pioneering Detroit-based law firm with a rich history of steering innovation since 1854, continues to grow its Michigan footprint while doubling down on its commitment to the state and region. The firm recently relocated its Ann Arbor office to a larger space at 101 North Main Street, Suite 200.

“Our new Ann Arbor location confirms our commitment to the City of Ann Arbor and the State of Michigan. This new office is in the center of Downtown, provides us additional room to continue to grow and add excellent new attorneys, all while providing our attorneys with a state-of-the-art space with all of the amenities a modern office can provide,” said Paul Mersino, President and CEO, Butzel. “It offers a premier work environment for collaborating with colleagues and further facilitates our single-minded focus on providing excellent service to meet our clients’ needs. And it does so in a city where we have a long history of providing a full-service legal option to the universities, hospitals, tech startup and venture capital community, and countless other companies to whom we’ve proven our abilities.”

Butzel’s new office reflects function, flexibility, and culture. Collaborative spaces will allow employees enhanced flexibility and functionality to work from different areas. The office is centrally located across from and within walking distance to the state and federal courts.

Individual offices are a focal point of Butzel’s office updates that have occurred in the past couple of years. Offices are identically equipped and furnished to enable plug-and-play use both for those with assigned offices and for visiting attorneys. The office is bright, filled with light, and promotes a sense of community while still offering individual, quiet office space. Butzel also has remote options for attorneys and staff.
