Detroit-based attorney George Donnini with Butzel Long quoted in the Detroit News article "Jennifer Crumbley may win despite testimony, expert says, as Oxford case goes to jury"

"The criminal justice system usually punishes you for your actions — for doing something wrong," Donnini said. "Here, it's for the defendant not doing something, and that's where the tension lies in this case. Prosecutors are saying she should've done more as a parent; the fact that she failed to do something is what is getting her in trouble, and that's why this is a unique trial."
