Chloë White navigates clients through the complexities of business and commercial transactions, offering tailored insights into both legal and operational matters. Her experience also extends to commercial litigation, where she advises clients on navigating complex legal challenges.

Prior to joining Hinshaw, Chloë represented women, minority-owned businesses, and executives, and handled high-asset family law litigation at a boutique law firm.

While in law school, Chloë was on the executive board of DePaul's Child and Family Law Society and an editor of the DePaul Journal of Health Care Law. Chloë gained a global perspective on law during her studies in Madrid, Spain, where she studied European Business & Commercial Law and European Human Rights Law at the Universidad Pontificia Comillas.
