Dan Schleifstein represents financial services institutions in complex commercial litigation across state and federal courts in New Jersey and New York. He handles high-stakes matters that require a hands-on, personal approach for successful and efficient litigation, whether through adjudication or negotiated resolution. Dan's extensive experience includes defensive litigation, default-driven commercial and residential litigation, and workouts for a diverse range of clients, from the nation's largest brick-and-mortar banks to non-traditional lenders of various sizes.

Dan also regularly counsels employers in New Jersey and New York on labor and employment issues, helping them effectively manage arising issues, mitigate risks, and litigate when necessary. He values building strong client relationships and takes the time to understand their needs and goals. This enables him to collaborate with clients in developing the best litigation and risk management strategies, both for individual matters and with a focus on the broader picture.

Dan empowers his clients to handle legal challenges with confidence, providing clear and effective support to achieve their endgame.
