Diane Ragosa represents financial services institutions in commercial and business litigation matters, in federal and state trial and appellate courts. She has extensive experience handling cases involving default-driven commercial and residential litigation, contract disputes, credit reporting disputes, and quiet title actions – with a focus on cost-effective resolutions.

Diane also represents clients in intellectual property litigation matters involving patent and trademark infringement and invalidity.

With a broad-based business background in engineering, operations, sales and marketing at a Fortune 50 company, Diane offers her clients a unique combination of legal and trial advocacy skills and proven business acumen, interpreting complex legal issues for business audiences and framing legal issues in the context of their strategic importance to the business.
