Mohamed F. Sweify is a bilingual, dual-qualified attorney in common and civil law jurisdictions. For more than a decade, Mohamed has provided counsel and resolution for diverse, international cross-border disputes through litigation and arbitration. He has a robust domestic and transnational litigation practice, which includes representing clients in commercial litigation matters before arbitration panels and federal and state courts. Mohamed leverages his experience on matters spanning a broad spectrum of industries and practices, including commercial, financial, investment, telecommunication, intellectual property, securities disputes, partnership and shareholder disputes, Islamic law, consumer financial services, lenders-related litigation, contract claims and construction matters.

He has considerable experience handling international arbitration matters under the rules of major arbitral institutions, including the American Arbitration Association/International Centre for Dispute Resolution (AAA-ICDR), the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC), JAMS, the London Court of International Arbitration (LCIA), the Cairo Regional Center for International Commercial Arbitration (CRCICA), the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA), and the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules.

Mohamed serves as an arbitrator and mediator. He is also an adjunct professor at Fordham Law School.

Prior to joining Hinshaw, Mohamed interned at the New York Court of Appeals with the Honorable Judge Jenny Rivera. Before qualifying in New York, Mohamed worked at a top-tier international arbitration law firm in the Middle East. He then joined the Egyptian Prosecution Office, where he handled a wide variety of governmental investigations and financial crimes.
