Trevor Mosby advises national and regional financial institutions on resolving distressed commercial lending relationships, routinely negotiating and documenting loan workout agreements. He has extensive experience interpreting and enforcing complex lending agreements and foreclosing on lender collateral through state and federal litigation. Trevor also counsels secured and unsecured creditors in consumer and commercial bankruptcy proceedings and often defends banks in lender liability matters.

Trevor represents lenders and borrowers in commercial real estate transactions and other asset-based lending deals by negotiating and preparing loan documents and advising on issues involving property title, corporate authority, and due diligence.
