

News

Anthony Davis and Steve Puiszis Discuss the Lawyers' Duty of Technological Competence - Part II

May 7, 2019

In a New York Law Journal column, Anthony Davis and Steve Puiszis present the second of two articles discussing the lawyers' duty of technological competence. The first article considered two realms of competence needed by today's lawyers: data security; and the technology used to run a law firm and practice law. This second article reviews four other areas that require technological competence: social media; electronic discovery; technology used by clients to build products or offer services; and technology used to present information in court.

Read the full article \(Part II, PDF\)

Read Part I \(PDF\)

You can also read the articles online at "An Update on Lawyers' Duty of Technological Competence: Part 1," published by the New York Law Journal, March 1, 2019, on the NYLJ website – AND – "An Update on Lawyers' Duty of Technological Competence: Part 2," published by the New York Law Journal, May 3, 2019, on the NYLJ website (subscription may be required).

Attorneys

Steven M. Puiszis