Ross Manella Discusses Fort Lauderdale Office Upscale Move in Law360 Pulse

April 11, 2023

Ross Manella—partner-in-charge of Hinshaw's Fort Lauderdale office—discussed the recent office move to The Main Los Olas, a state-of-the-art mixed-use office, residential, and retail development, to better accommodate the changing needs of attorneys and clients, and elevate the opportunities for collaboration and socially-focused activities.

Manella discussed the firm's decision to downsize the office space in favor of increased gathering spaces, high quality technology, and top-tier building amenities, which he says are "very important because we want it to reflect the highest quality of work product and service that we give to our clients."

"We think that this is not only an office for employees and attorneys to come to, but it's an office for clients to come to where we will do more presentations, more lunches, more dinners," Manella said. "We're looking at this not only as a home base for our attorneys but also for clients to be comfortable with and to use."

The article also noted Hinshaw's recent additions of partner Gary Khutorsky, senior counsel Jordana Kahn, and five new associates.
