Adam Guetzow Appointed Co-Practice Group Leader of Hinshaw's Health Care Practice

June 20, 2023

Hinshaw & Culbertson, LLP is pleased to announce that Chicago-based partner Adam Guetzow has been appointed co-practice group leader of the firm's national Health Care practice. Guetzow will serve alongside current interim practice group leader Stephen Moore.

As part of his new role, Guetzow will lead the firm's strategic expansion of its current health care practice, including an emphasis on aging services and long-term care capabilities. Hinshaw's Aging Services practice has grown exponentially in the past few years in response to industry expansion and a growing need for aging services nationwide. Guetzow focuses his practice on advising clients across the continuum of the aging service and long-term care industry, including home service agencies, assisted living facilities, sheltered care facilities, skilled nursing facilities, and continuing care retirement communities, with a growing emphasis on both litigation and regulatory enforcement issues before both state Departments of Public Health and the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services.

Hinshaw's Health Care practice provides transactional services, regulatory compliance counseling, risk management, and litigation services to clients nationwide.

Over the past decade, Guetzow has been actively involved in developing policy and has assisted with negotiations amongst other stakeholders and the re-drafting of Illinois legislation related to aging services and long-term care. He currently serves on the national Legal Committee as the State Designated representative for LeadingAge Illinois, an advocacy organization that represents more than 5,000 nonprofit aging services providers and organizations.
