

News

Lauren Campisi Featured on October Research’s “Keys to Real Estate” Podcast: Fishing for Answers About Chevron Deference

June 19, 2024

Lauren Campisi was the featured guest on an episode of the October Research Keys to Real Estate podcast. In the episode—titled “Fishing for Answers About Chevron Deference,”—Campisi delves into how the Loper Bright v. Raimondo case, a legal challenge to the longstanding Chevron doctrine of statutory interpretation, has created ripples across the real estate industry.

The case, currently before the U.S. Supreme Court, could impact the regulatory landscape for mortgage and title professionals, potentially bringing uncertainty and ambiguity to the industry. Campisi’s insightful discussion with host Mary Schuster urges real estate professionals to follow these developments and their potential impact on the industry.

Listen to the full episode on YouTube or on October Research’s website.

Attorneys

Lauren Campisi

Service Areas

Business & Commercial Transactions

Consumer Financial Services

Mortgage Servicing and Lender Litigation

Real Estate & Lending