Russell Klingaman Named a 2015 "Leader in the Law" by the Wisconsin Law Journal

February 6, 2015

The Wisconsin Law Journal has selected Russell A. Klingaman, a partner in the Milwaukee office, as a 2015 "Leader in the Law." Honorees are recognized for their outstanding leadership, career achievements, legal experience, and history of giving back through community and pro bono work.

Mr. Klingaman's achievements over the course of his more than 20 years practicing law are many. Much of his client work involves representing members of the aviation community and handling intellectual property matters. He also has a wealth of experience dealing with insurance law, complex business disputes and products liability cases. He has made presentations and authored numerous articles on a wide range of legal subjects. Mr. Klingaman is involved in several legal and aviation-industry associations, including the Lawyer-Pilots Bar Association, of which he is now president. Mr. Klingaman also serves as an adjunct professor at Marquette University Law School, where he teaches aviation law. Additionally, he teaches aviation law for undergraduates at the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh.
