She concentrates her practice in commercial litigation.

She has developed a proven track record of handling policy, risk management, and compliance litigation, as well as corporate, administrative, immigration, family, criminal, and civil law cases. She possesses extensive experience handling all facets of the litigation process, from conducting case investigations, performing legal research, drafting pleas and motions, to negotiating settlements and preparing cases for trial.

Prior to joining McV, she worked at a San Juan law firm. Before that she served as Assistant Prosecutor at the Office of Government Ethics and Attorney Advisor for the Office of Disaster Assistance at the U.S. Small Business Administration.

Ms. Robles-Torres served as a Municipal and Superior Court judge for over six years. As judge, she served as Coordinator and Presiding Judge of the Specialized Courtroom on Domestic Violence.

She directed the Office of Legal Affairs of the Puerto Rico Department of State, also serving as legal advisor to the Secretary. In addition, she was an Assistant Prosecutor at the Office of Government Ethics. She also served as Examining Officer for the Public Corporation for the Supervision and Insurance of Cooperatives in P.R. (COSSEC) overseeing controversies and disputes between COSSEC and the cooperatives and the cooperatives and their members.

Ms. Robles-Torres has served as Volunteer Attorney at both the Safe Passage Project and the LatinoJustice PRLDEF, helping change discriminatory practices via advocacy and litigation and providing legal services to refugee and immigrant children in the New York City-area who face deportation, despite their strong legal claim to stay in the U.S.
