

Manufacturer Liability

From assembly lines to nuts and bolts, individual claims to class actions, personal injury to regulatory issues (FDA or CPSC), Plunkett Cooney has more than nine decades of experience defending the interests of product manufacturers regarding design, manufacture and written product information (warnings and instructions).

Such representation requires advanced knowledge and preparation concerning a client's product, including its application, its design and the scientific principles associated with it. Often, our attorneys are at the plant, viewing the product, testing it, reviewing design drawings, evaluating prototypes etc. Being at ease when working with engineers whether mechanical, chemical or electrical, is a necessary and acquired skill which Plunkett Cooney attorneys possess.
