

Plunkett Cooney cracks Top 10 list of leading workplaces

December 21, 2010

Determined by employee surveys and independent research, Plunkett Cooney, one of Michigan's oldest and largest law firms, recently ranked seventh on the Detroit Free Press' 2010 list of "Top Places to Work" for midsize companies. This is the firm's third consecutive honor, but its first top 10 finish.

"Receiving this recognition three years in a row is a great honor and continues to validate that the firm is moving in the right direction," said Henry B. Cooney, the firm's President and CEO. "Being among the top 10 mid-size companies is very exciting and something we can build on for the future."

The Free Press partnered with WorkplaceDynamics of Exton, PA to conduct the survey of 202 regional employers in three categories ranging in size from small businesses to employers with over 500 workers. Of the 132,000 workers employed in the participating industries, 41,291 voluntarily completed the extensive Free Press survey.

Employees answering the survey rated their companies on 22 factors with prompts such as "My manager makes good use of my skills" and "I have many opportunities to learn and grow at this organization." What mattered most overall for the surveyed employees was the belief that their employer was moving in the right direction, followed closely by working for an employer that operates by strong values and ethics, and having confidence in the organization's leader.

Generally, high marks went to the top employers for their management abilities, their willingness to help foster employees' careers and the direction in which their companies are headed.

Plunkett Cooney maintains a firm wide "Great Place to Work" program to enhance the work experience for all employees. This program goes beyond compensation to focus on added value benefits beyond traditional health, vision, dental and insurance plans offered by most companies. The program includes such opportunities as continuing education, special events, employee convenience services, diversity recruitment and retention, mentoring, wellness programs and much more.

Plunkett Cooney has been recognized recently by several organizations for its employee retention programs, including the Michigan Business & Professional Association, which named the firm, for six consecutive years (2005-2010) as one of its "101 Best & Brightest Places to Work For."
