What inspired you to enter your field of law?

I'm inspired when I can help my clients transition their lives and overcome their legal, business, and emotional challenges. Family law was a natural fit for me, as I was practicing real estate and finance when the market imploded and I amicably divorced my husband.

How do you feel your work is making a difference?

Leading with honesty, respect and without ego, my client relationships are a partnership in which I guide them through a significant life event. I help them redefine their familial unit, to strive for an environment that promotes positivity and growth.

What about you that makes you different from other attorneys? My business acumen, which I developed practicing real estate, finance, and commercial litigation, is what truly sets me apart as a family lawyer. My responsiveness and dedication to my clients' goals are a game-changer for them.

How would you describe the defining characteristics that have led to your success?

My success has been built on relentless positivity and tenacity, learning from failures, overcoming obstacles, daily meditation, and maintaining my network of lifelong relationships. Emotional intelligence, instinct, and the ability to develop creative strategies that achieve clients' goals define my success.

What are you excited about in the new year for you and/or your practice? Joining RCCB is one of the best decisions of my career. The firm's unwavering support, hiring Kaitlyn Mazur and another attorney in the near future, has been instrumental. I'm excited to see the practice grow alongside such an entrepreneurial firm.

When you aren't practicing law, what can we find you doing? When I am not working, I am at the beach, staying healthy, and living life to the fullest by traveling, attending concerts, going to PSU/Philadelphia sporting events, and spending time with my two children who are in college.
