A tripartite agreement to save NAFTA has been reached. The accord would be renamed the U.S.-Mexico-Canada Agreement ("USMCA"). The USMCA will replace the North American Free Trade Agreement, which dates to 1994 and covers $1.2 trillion in trade. The deal caps a turbulent period for relations between the U.S. and Canada, traditionally close allies on national security and trade. This program will explain the key provisions of the revised trade agreement addressing areas ranging from auto and electronics manufacturing to patents, agricultural trade, trade remedies, investment disputes and e-commerce.

Join us to hear the details about the negotiation and how the final agreement may impact your company or your clients and customers.
