About:

Companies that sell to the Federal Government also buy a host of complex employment issues. From having to comply with unique contractor-specific laws, to facing ever increasing regulatory scrutiny, in-house counsel for government contractors face distinct legal challenges every day. Last year this panel provided an overview of these challenges. This year's panel will dive deeper to help you respond to some of government contracting's thorniest issues, including:

- * Investigating potential False Claims Act violations and managing known whistleblowers;
- * Advanced issues in Service Contract Act compliance;
- * Tips on how to prepare for and survive a government audit; and
- * Best practices for labor mapping and ensuring contract compliance.

Learn how to avoid the traps that have snared contractors in the past as our panel provides practical guidance to help you navigate the complex legal challenges facing companies looking to do business with the federal government.
