Topic:

Cyber-Insurance (Trends And How To Get Paid); Class Actions (Trends And How To Avoid); And Damages (Trends And How To Calculate)

About:

Companies have begun taking into account cybersecurity concerns when considering overall enterprise risk management and insurance risk transfer mechanisms, just as they do with other hazards of doing business. Yet there is no standard cyber-insurance policy, and many corporate cyber-insurance policies are bespoke. This discussion focuses on: 1) battleground legal issues concerning cyber-insurance (and other types of insurance), including discussions of how to make sure all parties involved are properly covered and reimbursed; 2) the types of damages, theories and models in data breach class actions and some of the issues underlying these types of calculations and theories; and 3) how the latest class action developments impact the conducting of an incident response.
