It is often said that running a M&A process can feel like a second full time job for executive management. Done the “right” way, the amount of time and stress can be reduced to a manageable amount while at the same time achieving a successful transaction outcome. Done the wrong way, your day-to-day business suffers and the transaction does not get completed. Please join us for a presentation and interactive discussion with several M&A and Industry veterans as they draw from decades of experience to share best practices and practical tips to ensure your next foray into the M&A process is a successful one.
