Regulators across the country are increasingly focused on per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS) in consumer products. As federal standards for regulating this complex class of chemicals near adoption, now is the time for businesses and retailers that produce or sell products containing PFAS to assess potential liabilities and take steps to minimize risk. Join Sheppard Mullin and Ramboll for a discussion of:

- evolving PFAS requirements;
- the current PFAS regulatory and litigation landscape and what's ahead; and
- critical steps to avoid or mitigate PFAS enforcement actions and litigation.
