

Food Advertising, Labeling, and Litigation Conference 2025

September 17-18, 2025

Event Sponsor: Food & Drug Law Institute

Following the transition to a new administration, the ongoing discussions surrounding food and dietary supplement ingredients, color additives, and related topics highlight increasing uncertainty about the future regulatory landscape. Join FDLI for this two-day conference to learn from and network with leading practitioners and experts in the food and dietary supplement industry, legal practitioners, members of consumer protection organizations, and regulators, all of whom will address the most pressing issues and challenges in product advertising, labeling, and litigation.

Partner Christopher Van Gundy will be speaking on the panel "Dietary Supplements Litigation Trends Update" on September 18 from 12:45-1:45 PM.

As the supplement industry booms, litigation highlights key areas for industry to watch. Join us to learn more about litigation of dosage of dietary supplements; online sales of dietary supplements; false advertising class actions, such as Montera v. Premier Nutrition Corp.; and more.

Partner Abby Meyer will be speaking on the panel "Consumer Class Action and Product Liability Litigation Trends Update" on September 18 from 10:45 AM - 12:00 PM.

Panelists will discuss current developments in burgeoning areas such as health halo litigation (including sugar content and protein claims), contaminants litigation (including heavy metals, PFAS, and microplastics), and more. In addition, speakers will touch on the effectiveness of preemption as a line of defense and developments in standing.
