Tapping the Growth Market in China: Challenges and Opportunities for the Fashion Industry

The panel will discuss how fashion industry players have been successful in capturing the opportunities in China, and the legal, business, and political trends and outlook impacting the industry sector in China. The program will provide practical suggestions on how to access and expand in the China market including a review of successful market entry strategies, a discussion on the strategies to protect intellectual property and brands, and a discussion of risk factors that frequently burden foreign investors in China such as corruption and business ethics.

Protecting Consumer Privacy in the Digital Age: What Fashion Companies Need to Know

The fashion industry may be hit hard by privacy issues related to use of data or images in advertising or other promotional activities, including Facebook Sponsored Stories, the Video Privacy Protection Act, and general standing to bring a consumer privacy claim. This program will cover recent developments and how to avoid litigation relating to consumer promotional deals. Specifically we will discuss what agreeing to work within Facebook's API means for your ability to use the data from that deal with other ad networks.
