Crain's New York Business has named New York partner Jodi Stein among its list of Notable Women in Law for 2022. The annual list recognized 119 women not only for their skills and accomplishments in the courtroom, but for their leadership outside of it.

In an Except from Crain's: "Major real estate developers call upon Jodi Stein to help them with the toughest part of their projects: obtaining the required zoning and land use approvals from New York City agencies. As a partner in Sheppard Mullin's real estate, land use and environmental practice group, Stein recently represented AB Capstone and Arch Companies, providing a zoning opinion for a $106 million loan to build a mixed-use project in Queens, just one of many high-profile projects. Before private practice, Stein was vice president of acquisitions and development for one of the largest privately held real estate companies in North America. Earlier in her career, she spent several years representing West Harlem in its negotiations with Columbia University."
