Partner Jonathan Meyer comments on special counsel Robert Mueller's much-anticipated report to the attorney general and the possibility of wrapping up the investigation. According to Meyer, if the investigation is in fact ending, one reason is that Mueller may be bending over backward to stay within the scope of his original mandate and make sure the probe doesn't turn into a longer, more wide-ranging investigation... He seems laser focused on his assignment, which is to get to the bottom of Russian involvement in the 2016 election.
