Brad works with clients to develop creative solutions and implement innovative strategies that reflect their business goals.

Brad's bankruptcy litigation practice focuses on advising debtors, creditors and trustees of their rights and remedies. His cases span a variety of industries and business sizes.

An experienced trial attorney and an appointed Chapter 11 trustee, Brad litigates fraudulent transfer, preference, and other recovery disputes in hearings before U.S. bankruptcy courts and defends appeals to district and appellate courts. He also represents parties in commercial disputes outside of bankruptcy.

Prior to entering private practice, Brad was a Trial Attorney for the Department of Justice United States Trustee's Program, serving as counsel of record in over 650 bankruptcy cases representing the U.S. Trustee in cases involving health care, commercial real estate and internet technology matters. He also served as a Special Assistant United States Attorney where he assisted with white collar criminal prosecutions involving bankruptcy.

He is a fixture in the bankruptcy bar in the Eastern District of Virginia and District of Columbia, and has served on the local rules committees in both districts. Due to his knowledge of local practice, Brad is regularly sought out as local counsel for
