Office: Tampa

A skilled problem-solver, Harry is adept at overcoming tax problems when representing businesses in state and federal tax matters.

Harry brings over 25 years of experience as a trusted resource for tax, corporate and estate planning clients. Known for his strategic thinking and thorough advice, Harry efficiently advises clients seeking tax advice on energy-related transactions. He also advises on general tax matters for private business transactions and tax controversies.

Harry has extensive experience representing pass-through entities in tax credit transactions, as well as real estate developers, start-up fundraisers, not-for-profits, franchisees, multi-unit business owners and various other professionals. He advises businesses on day-to-day tax matters and provides corporate advice and guidance during the process of buying or selling a business. Harry has successfully advocated for clients before the Internal Revenue Service in administrative and federal court proceedings and before Florida taxing authorities and Florida courts.

Harry also counsels clients on matters involving partnership and corporate structuring, franchising, wills and trusts, leases, employment agreements and succession planning.
