Keegan uses his diverse litigation skills to dissect legal issues and efficiently deliver positive client results.

Keegan focuses his practice on business and commercial litigation in both state and federal courts. His practice focuses on business torts, insurance disputes and real property disputes, and he has significant experience in property ownership and real estate secured lending, shareholder disputes, health insurance and ERISA claims, commercial disputes, product liability and toxic torts, eminent domain, disputes involving life insurance proceeds, and bankruptcy avoidance actions. He has also appeared before planning and zoning commissions and county boards throughout Missouri and Illinois to object to the construction of competing cell towers. Keegan's varied experience provides him with an in-depth understanding of the law across multiple subject areas and industries, enabling him to effectively and efficiently counsel clients with practical recommendations and creative solutions.
