Join us in-person for the third installment in our series discussing Minnesota's evolving cannabis landscape. This multi-installment series will provide helpful information on how Minnesota-based businesses can navigate through the integration of HF100.

As Minnesota continues to develop its retail cannabis regulatory structure in advance of commercial cannabis sales, banks and credit unions need to begin preparing for this new industry. Because marijuana remains illegal federally, the state legal cannabis industry presents unique legal and compliance issues for banks and credit unions. This is true whether or not the financial institution is planning to provide services to the cannabis industry.

Stinson Partner Zane Gilmer, Stinson's Director of Government Relations Will Blauvelt, President and CEO of Empyreal Logistics Deirdra O'Gorman, President and CEO of Shield Compliance Tony Repanich and Chief Regulatory Officer at Minnesota Office of Cannabis Management, Max Zappia will provide insight on the various legal and regulatory issues that banks and credit unions need to consider as the cannabis industry develops in Minnesota. They'll provide practical advice for institutions that are considering providing depository or lending services to the cannabis industry as well as those institutions that are not currently considering servicing the industry.
