Stinson LLP Chief Human Resources Officer Heidi E. Burton is featured in HR Daily Advisor's Faces of HR spotlight, a series that profiles HR professionals, offering a glimpse into their career and sharing insight on the HR industry and its workforce.

In "Faces of HR: Heidi Burton in Harmony with Growth at Stinson LLP," Burton discusses her career journey, sharing successes, key lessons learned and what she values most in her work.

"My favorite part about working in the industry is developing leaders and their mindsets. My job is to help them understand 'why' their leadership role is important, impactful, and influential. This understanding helps foster extraordinary business results through motivated and engaged employees," Burton says. "I have found leading first with curiosity and appreciative inquiry helps create a welcoming environment and encourages growth, well-being, and inclusion."

Burton provides insight into current HR strategies, trends impacting both HR professionals and employees, including employee well-being resources; diversity, equity and inclusion initiatives; hybrid and remote work policies; change management; upskilling; and talent attraction and retention. She also shares her perspective on the future of the industry, which includes the adoption of new artificial intelligence technologies, and her advice for prospective HR professionals.

Burton leads the firm's Human Resources Management services, working as a strategic partner alongside firm leadership to identify needs and set goals for fostering the growth and advancement of the firm's employees and to deliver exceptional client service that aligns with the firm's business objectives. She also works to institute best practices and training for attorneys and staff, including tailored programs to increase efficiency, strengthen employees' skillsets, improve leadership capabilities and contribute to the overall health of the firm.
