Stinson LLP Of Counsel Nerissa Hamilton-vom Baur is featured in the Law360 article, "Stinson Adds CBP Trade Regulations Atty to DC Office," which spotlights her recent transition to the firm and Stinson's continued expansion of its regulatory bench.

A veteran of U.S. Customs and Border Protection, Hamilton-vom Baur shares insights into her move from government service to private practice, citing Stinson's values and its "pragmatic, friendly and collaborative" culture as key factors in her decision. She also noted the firm's strong commitment to diversity, particularly its significant representation of women in leadership and partner roles.

Hamilton-vom Baur also spoke about her commitment to mentorship, emphasizing the impact of early career mentors and her desire to provide that same support to others as she steps into her new role.

She brings nearly two decades of experience across trade, compliance and intellectual property enforcement to her practice. Her extensive experience in trade rules and government decision-making informs her practical, strategic approach to advising clients in complex regulatory issues.
