Dallas Managing Partner Paul Lackey authored an article for Office Insight about the firm's new downtown Dallas office. Lackey details the positive impacts of the new space's design aesthetic for attracting and retaining top talent.

"Stinson LLP's new office provides a modern, updated space that mirrors the firm's values, allowing for growth, increased efficiency, and flexibility," Lackey writes. "Stunning views of downtown Dallas, swaths of natural light, high ceilings, and crisp design elements are a few things visitors and employees will notice as they walk through the new lobby and throughout the space."

He continues, "The new space is centrally located, benefitting our clients, community partners, attorneys and staff while offering greater collaboration and growth flexibility in a more modern setting." Additionally, Lackey highlights the office's flexible layout, stating it allows the firm to rapidly adapt to their changing needs.

Stinson Managing Partner Allison Murdock also provided her perspective. "The Dallas office is an integral part of the firm," Murdock said. "This move enables us to be centrally located to our clients and positions us for growth in a competitive market. It is also an opportunity to further cement ourselves into the Dallas business community."

The new office is located at 2200 Ross Avenue, Suite 2900 in Dallas, Texas. Gensler served as the architect.
