

Stinson Grows Regulatory Team in Washington, DC with Attorney Nerissa Hamilton-vom Baur

Press Release

06.10.2025

Stinson LLP is pleased to welcome Nerissa Hamilton-vom Baur to its Washington, DC, office. She joins the firm's Energy, Environmental, Mining and Transportation practice division, bringing deep experience in trade, compliance and intellectual property enforcement.

Hamilton-vom Baur most recently served in the Office of Trade, Regulations and Rulings at U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP), where she advised on a broad array of international trade issues, including import compliance and IP enforcement. During her time at CBP, she was also appointed as a trade policy liaison to Congress, assisting with coordination on key trade initiatives.

With nearly two decades of experience and a background in government service, Hamilton-vom offers clients clear, strategic guidance through complex regulatory frameworks. Her practical approach helps business to balance legal compliance with operational realities.

"Nerissa's significant experience in imports, along with her deep understanding of the regulatory landscape, makes her a valuable addition to our team," said Andy Davis, chair of the firm's Energy, Environmental, Mining and Transportation practice division. "Her insights will strengthen the support we provide to clients navigating the complexities of cross-border trade."

She holds a J.D. from Vermont Law School and a B.A. from the University of Chicago.
