With economic development incentives, there are often “strings attached” that need to be addressed at various points in projects. Like all states, Ohio has its own legal peculiarities for liens, payment requirements, and restrictions on liability-shifting in construction contracts, among other key topics. In this edition of the Grow in Ohio webinar series, Vorys attorneys Rick Grady and Michael Shoenfelt will highlight important considerations from project inception to best practices for mitigating risks of claims during the construction phase and appropriate closeout processes.
