

New Episode of 'Vorys at Work' Podcast Discusses Employment Issues in the Gig Economy

Related Attorneys

Nelson D. Cary

Jackie Ford

Related Services

Labor and Employment

NEWS | 6.5.2019

In the gig economy, workers make their living through irregular short-term assignments, typically on an independent contractor basis. The number of gig employees is steadily increasing and the “gig” business model is growing in the broader business sector. In the latest episode of “Vorys at Work,” Jackie Ford talks with Vorys attorney Nelson Cary about what legal issues employers should be aware of when using gig workers and other independent contractors.

All Vorys at Work episodes and additional resources can be found at vorys.com/vorysatworkpodcast. They can also be found on SoundCloud and Apple Podcasts. New episodes will be added each month.

The related items referenced in the podcast can be found at the links below:

- Vorys on Labor blog
- Vorys on Labor article on the SuperShuttle decision