Jilly Fox, an associate in the Vorys Columbus office and a member of the corporate group, was recently profiled by the Case Western Reserve University School of Law. The written feature focuses on Fox's time as a law student at Case Western's Law School and her legal industry experience after graduation.

When asked to provide advice for students and prospective lawyers, Fox encouraged them to "pay attention to what interests and excites you. Do you enjoy contract drafting or solving problems for corporate clients? Are you drawn to transactional or litigation work? Figuring that out early can help shape your career path."
