

Class-Action Foul Territory

Lawyers want to force teams to use 'foul pole to foul pole' netting to protect fans from injury.

By: Randy Maniloff

The Wall Street Journal

7.23.15

For over a century, baseball fans hit by foul balls or splintered bats have struck out virtually every time they've sought compensation for their injuries through the legal system. And the reason for this slump hasn't changed in all that time. Think of it as plaintiffs' lawyers in Cubs uniforms.

Randy Maniloff's full commentary regarding recent litigation against Major League Baseball is available here. (Subscription required)

This correspondence should not be construed as legal advice or legal opinion on any specific facts or circumstances. The contents are intended for general informational purposes only and you are urged to consult a lawyer concerning your own situation and legal questions.