Aggie advises clients on corporate governance, fiduciary obligations, internal conflicts and disputes, and shareholder rights, and counsels her clients through business divorces.

OVERVIEW

Aggie Mingos focuses her practice on business and commercial litigation and transactional matters. She represents closely held businesses and shareholders of closely held corporations in litigation and in shareholder derivative actions. Aggie also advises clients on corporate governance, fiduciary obligations, internal conflicts and disputes, shareholder rights, and counsels her clients through business divorces. She has extensive experience in commercial litigation and has effectively handled complex contract disputes. She counsels her clients on various legal issues and implications facing their business and offers an in-depth understanding conscious of their future.

Aggie frequently represents lending institutions and parties involved in commercial real estate transactions as well as litigation involving commercial real estate loans. She is also skilled in bankruptcy law, having represented both creditors and debtors in bankruptcy matters.

In addition, she counsels clients on various labor and employment issues. She has successfully defended businesses facing wage and hour claims, discrimination claims, and sexual harassment claims. Aggie is trained to conduct internal investigations, particularly within the context of sexual harassment.

Aggie began her career at White and Williams where she practiced law for several years and established a foundation for her legal success. She then practiced law as a member of the Financial Restructuring and Bankruptcy group of an AmLaw 200 firm, where she also expanded her legal experience in real estate and finance transactions. She was most recently a partner at a New York firm where she handled transactional and commercial litigation matters and advised clients as outside general counsel.
