Focused on providing clients with insurance coverage advice and litigating complex insurance coverage matters, including general liability, construction, professional liability, and product recall matters.

OVERVIEW

Daniel Bryer is an experienced litigator with the Insurance Coverage and Bad Faith Practice who has a flexible approach to problem-solving that allows him to meet the needs of each client in the best way possible.

Dan is a Partner who litigates complex insurance coverage disputes and provides insurance coverage advice to insurers. He works closely with clients to develop effective, efficient litigation strategies to best meet his clients' needs.

Dan provides clients advice regarding general commercial liability, excess liability, multimedia, environmental, and professional liability insurance policies. He has advised clients on claims involving opioids and other pharmaceutical products, baby food products, construction defects and catastrophic injuries. His litigation practice focuses on insurance coverage matters in state and federal court. Dan recently achieved a very favorable verdict as trial counsel following a three-week trial in New Jersey state court. He has also served as a team leader on large litigations involving professional liability, construction defect, product recall, and fidelity claims. He has found success in cases through alternative dispute resolution, including mediation and arbitration. He also litigates healthcare matters, and has successfully defended life, health, and disability claims brought in state and federal court against insurers, plan administrators, employers, and managed care organizations, including in cases governed by ERISA.
