OVERVIEW

Eric Sauter is a real estate finance, general real estate and corporate lawyer with more than a decade of experience closing loans. He represents lenders, institutional investors and borrowers in commercial real estate transactions across the United States. Eric is experienced in all aspects of business banking, construction, bridge, mezzanine and permanent mortgage loan originations, structuring, purchase and sales, and associated mortgage loan modifications, from application through closing. Eric is known as a deal-closer and prides himself on developing lasting client relationships.

Beyond his real estate finance practice, Eric represents real estate investors, landlords and tenants in general real estate matters, including financing, leasing and subleasing in all asset classes, as well as in sale/leaseback transactions, master leases and ground leases. His corporate law practice includes drafting company formation and operating agreements, issuing non-consolidation and state law enforceability opinions, and advising on other general corporate law matters.
