OVERVIEW

Jeremiah Vandermark is Counsel at White and Williams in the Financial Restructuring and Bankruptcy practice group. Jeremiah counsels financial institutions, tech companies and other parties-in-interest in relation to financially distressed businesses, including complex reorganizations, litigation, work outs and financial restructurings. Jeremiah regularly litigates matters before the state, federal and bankruptcy courts of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

With a results-oriented, business focus, Jeremiah uses his restructuring experience, substantive bankruptcy knowledge and trial advocacy skills to negotiate and litigate, if necessary, to maximize value for clients.

Separately, Jeremiah has conducted countless hours of pro bono work, from representing a Guatemalan refugee, facing persecution in his home country and seeking asylum in the United States, to representing a small-town Pennsylvania farmer whose property had been destroyed by a large lumber company. Jeremiah is also a veteran of the U.S. Armed Forces, having served in Afghanistan during Operation Enduring Freedom.
