OVERVIEW

Victoria Fuller is a Partner and Co-Chair of the Labor and Employment Practice Group. She practices out of White and Williams' Boston office. Victoria has over 17 years of experience as a civil litigator, focusing on employment litigation and counseling, business litigation, insurance coverage and bad faith litigation. Victoria is well-known for her creativity, commitment, efficiency and strategic focus with clients.

Victoria regularly represents businesses, educational institutions, and non-profits before the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination, as well as in state and Federal Court. In addition, she counsels employers with respect to a variety of employment matters including hiring, termination (including RIFs), requests for accommodation, policies and procedures, and restrictive covenants.

Victoria also advises and represents insurers in complex coverage and bad faith disputes. She is also a seasoned commercial litigator and has represented clients in a variety of sophisticated litigation matters.

Victoria formerly served as an editor of the Boston Bar Journal, co-chaired the Boston Bar Association's Massachusetts Practice and Procedures Committee, and is a former member of the Boston Bar Association's Education Committee. She is also a volunteer Hearing Committee Member for the Board of Bar Overseers.
