

International Group Presents on the Evolution of CFIUS

Temple University School of Law
10.21.20

On October 7, Gary Biehn, Chair of the International Group, and Gwenn Barney, presented to Temple Law's International Law Society on the evolution of the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States (CFIUS). The virtual presentation included an overview of changes to CFIUS's review of foreign investment in the United States following the passage of the Foreign Investment Risk Review Modernization Act (FIRRMA) in 2018, and a case study in a CFIUS review through the lens of the recent TikTok/ByteDance deal unwinding.

Temple Law's International Law Society is a student organization that uses a variety of social and academic events to expose students to the many aspects of international law.

The International Group at White and Williams offers counsel to U.S.- and foreign-based clients in a wide range of complex international matters, including customs and international trade, dispute resolution, corporate transactions and capital markets and securities, among other areas.
